The bullying has gotten out of control. We can't have a conversation without people just being extraordinarily cruel and sarcastic to each other. That isn't right. We are neighbors. We are supposed to be a community. This site is closed until further notice.

When a respected reporter can't even comment on a post without putting the poster down then I know it's time shut it down for a while. When a friend who's opinion I respect is compelled make a post that she is leaving the group over yesterday's cruelty to one another then I know it's time for a time out. When someone posted that the cruelty was "so entertaining" and that she loved it and the Michael Jackson popcorn gif representing people sitting watching people being mean to each other then it's time for a time out.

When you are mean and sarcastic to someone about something that is important to them it causes them to react in kind. We had a spiral of cruelty. I can handle it directed at myself. I will not tolerate it happening to everyone else.
