

William Cline I'm getting pretty fed up with crap like this. People don't sign themselves up for donating hours of personal time to be on a board so they can give their spouse a raise. They'd be better off working a little extra with the spare time they would have by not running. To call into question someone's integrity without mentioning a single issue is crap. And for any candidate running to use this argument to get votes really means they don't have much to say. Let's see some talk about real issues instead of more nonsense from an adult that behaves like a child when it comes to name calling.
